By December 20, 2023

After a successful career of over thirty years, the last six spent with Bovis, Kyle, Burch & Medlin, Brian Alligood has retired and handed off the continued success of the North Carolina office to Camilla DeBoard.

Brian, a North Carolina native, served as a member of state bars in both North Carolina and Georgia. He joined Bovis Kyle in 2017 to open its Greensboro office.

Alligood completed his undergraduate degree at The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and his J.D. at Duke University. Over his tenure in law, he focused his primary practice areas on the defense of long-term care facilities, physicians, nurses, and hospitals, successfully defending medical malpractice and nursing home cases through jury verdict. His long-time colleague, partner Alicia Bray, continues serving clients in these areas, drawing on her many years of working closely with Brian to maintain his high standards of practice. Camilla DeBoard, managing partner of the Greensboro office, has recognized that Brian's retirement "leaves big shoes to fill."

Brian continues to reside in the North Carolina area with his wife and son.
